Topera, Kansas, Jan. 18. The adoption of the new cancus rule by the Alliance members of the Legisianne, whereby no Senatorial candidate will be considered as a cancas nominee until 83 legislators, or a joint ballot majority unite on him, has, in a measure, restored the confidence of the Republican leaders and greatly improved Senator Ingalis' chances for re-election It is now believed that the jealousies existing among the Senatorial aspirarts before the p ople a party will prevent any of them from securing the requisite just ballot majority, and that a deadlock will chaue, which will probably result in the election of a Republican unless the cancus rule is broken.

SATURDAY JANUARY 17, 1891.

The Washington correspondent of the Boston Herald writes that "Quay's substitute is one of Hoar's greatest dangers just now." This shows how the Democratic partisans regard the performance of the Pennsylvania Senator, but as the Quay bill is before Mr. Hoar's committee he will doubtless see that it is not reported to the Senate so as to cripple the Election bill now pending.

The Boston Herald tries to break the force of the action of the Democratic Senators in favor of the free coinage of silver as much as possible, but hus to admit that it was "carried through the Senate in copsequence of the very material support it received from the Democratic members."

Does Not Stand the Test.

The secret ballot bill is now before the Maine Legislature. There is no demand for this legislation among the people generally, but a few gentlemen who sought to force a similar will through at the last session, aided by some of the newspapers in Loudo the State, are vehemently protesting that the State, are veherently protesting that public sentificant s clamoring for this change. In other words they are trying to coerce the people instead of reflecting to coerce the people instead of r their views. That the proposed system is both expensive and complicated cannot be both expensive and complete and complicated cannot be both expensive and complete well sware that the advocates of the law, make an attempt to brush aside this charge, but it is a weakly effort and the ford.

MAILE LEGISLITURE.

Large Variety of Bills and Petitions Introduced.

AUGUSTA, Jan. 16. A large number of bills was introduced to-day. The one attracting the most attention was a bill providing for a board of registration in cities, the board to consist of three members, one appointed by the Governor for four years, other two for two years, one member from the party polling the bigger gubernatorial vote. to be nom nated by the City Committees and appointed by the Mayor. The members of the board are not to be. eligible to municipal office. The board is to have exclusive charge of the check list, no revision of which can be made without the parties appear in person. No name shall be stricken off before such party is summoned to appear before the board. The bill provides for imprisonment in case of fraud. The city is to pay the bills of the board. The board has all the functions relating to registration formerly had by municipal officers. It can summon witnesses and impose penalties. The bill was presented by Senster Hulnes.

Other bills were presented to amend the coloring day of the Maine dairy monder that State shall not over the board. The close of that State shall not over the maine dairy municipal officers of the closing day of the Maine dairy monder that State shall not over the maine dairy municipal officers. It can summon with a large attendance. Hon. Z. A. Gliber at the operation of the centrifugal cream separations formerly had by municipal officers. It can summon witnesses and impose penalties. The bill was presented by Senster Hulnes.

Other bills were presented to amend the coloring day of the Maine dairy monder the following into tote.

Our statement in the article was that stuffing the ballot boxes and buildowing negroes were making soundrels and ruffines out of the sons of gentlemen. Another was that the plan taid down in the new constitution of Missiasippi, the reading or intelligence test, was a transparent piece of humbug and would not of feat the negro vote unless traud is practiced. BERLIN, Jun. 16. The treezing weather which has again set to is causing much alarm among those interested in shipping. The immense ice floes in the Elbe render navigation in that river extremely dangerous for even the stoutest vessels. Several steamers carrying mails started from Hamburg this morning, but only succeeded in forcing their way to Blankehes, where they are stuck fast in the ice. Several other steamers have become disabled by the ice and are drifting helplessly, of Cox Haven.

There were other young ladies in garrison just then—Miss Wharstages in garrison just the mains what-ton visiting her brother and Miss McCrea-staying at the Burnhams. There were several pretty girls in the neighboring town who frequently came out and spent a few days with the families at the post, and all these of course, as well as the young married ladies, were the recipients of much attention on the part of the of-ficers, young and old. It is a fact well understood in army circles that few officers are too old to tender such attentions and no woman too old to receive them.

And Mrs. Lane was rejoicing in the sucress of hir projects for the benefit of Georgia Marshall. Her friend was a pronounced success from the day of her arrival; and yet it was somewhat difficult to say why. She was not a beauty, despite her levely eyes; she had none of those flattering, soothing, half caressing vays some women use with such telling reast some women use with such clining effect on almost every man they seek to impress. She was not chatty. She was anything but confidential. She was rather silent and decidedly reserved, yet a most attentive listener withal; and them she had the courage of her opinion. ions. It was the third morning after the escape of the prisoner Goss, and for forty-ight hours nothing else had been talked of among the soldiers, and nothing had eveited so much comment among the excited so much comment among the families at the post. Up to this moment not a trace had been found. The two iron stats in front of his window had been cut through swiftly and noiselessly from within with watch spring saws, and the tallow and iron filings lay about the stony window sill. He had been thoroughly searched before being put in that cell, and it was absolutely certain that rie ther files nor tallow were then in his possession. The guard swore that no man had had access to him afterward. A wire netting prevented anything from being thrown to him from the outside, and this had been forced upward and outward after the bars were cut. The sergeant of the guard was sure that no man had touched or even spoken to h m. except when he himself had seen his dunner and supper handed in.

There could have been no collusion on the part of the sentries, for the men on No. 1 all through the day and night were of the infantry, and warm friends of Brent, who would have lost no chance of putting a bullet through the supposed assailant in the event of his attempting to escape. The blacksmith said it would take several hours—at least five—to file through these two bars, and the man must have worked with the patience of a beaver. It was a drop of only seven fest to the ground without, for the window overlooked the uphill slope back of dow overlowed the upon slope care or the guard house; and yet, as he proba-bly had to come through head first, that was quite a fall. The prints of his out-stread hands were found in the dust heap, and it looked as though he must behind him; a man tripped over a log between him and the road, then ran like inad down toward the old station. It was too dark to recognize who it could was too carr to recognize who it could be. The officer of the grand had stopped to interrogate the sentry on reaching his poet, but Mr. Hearn had pushed ahead, and down at the foot of the hill-had plainly heard a horse's hoofs and the light rumble of wheels crossing the bridge and coing at a greating the bridge and going at a spanking trot; yet soldiers returning from pass, reliable men, had neither seen nor heard horse or; wagon anywhere on the flats along which lay the road to town. An effort had been made to trail the wheel effort had been made to trail the wheel tracks from the bridge, but, though a place was found among the trees near the old station where a horse and buggy had evicently stood for two or three hours, it was impossible to determine which way they had gone after crossing the stream, for the farm wagons coming from every by road in the morning had totally obliterated the tracks.

her own olive branches were clambering the fences and having a battle royal with the progeny of Mrs. Sergt. Flynn with the progeny or large. Sergit. Typic at the other end of the garrison. And, as luck would have it, who should come along the gravel walk but the major and the doctor, arm in arm, at which sight Miss Marshall's expressive eyes, brimming with merriment, sought the half vexed features of Capt. Lane, who had here floreting uneasily in his chair brimming with merriment, sought the half vexed features of Capt. Lane, who had been fidgeting uneasily in his chair during her ladyship's exordium. Like many another excellent soldier this practised trooper had no weapon with which to silence a woman's tongue.

"You'll find I'm right, Mrs. Lane. See if you don't," proceeded Mrs. Graves, all unconscious of the coming pair.

"You found I wasn't mistaken about Maj. Kenyon; and they are just as like as two peas in a pod—both of them."

Then, recalled to the possibilities of the situation by the mirthful glasm in Miss Marshall's eye and the apdible chuckles of Mr. Lee, she whirled about and caught sight of the object of her dissertation.

"Oh, it's you they're laughing at, is it?" she hailed. "I was just talking that three days ago, major, when you showed her what a cynical old party you were. No wonder the young efficers in our regiment lose all love for their profession after bearing you talk. If I were Col. Morris I wouldn't have you contaminating the lieutenants of the Eleventh the way you were trying it on Mr. Hearn the other day."

"Where is Mr. Hearn, by the way?"

maked Mrs. Lane, eager to put an end to such an unprofitable controversy. "He hasn't been in here for nearly two days. Corne, major—come, doctor, walk in and at awhile. We want to hear how Corp.

you," answered the surgeon. "I cannot stop just now; we came over to meet the mail, for the orderly seems to have an unusually big load this morning. Here tome the youngsters up from the post-office now."

Mrs. Alice Patterson, about thirty years of age, was alone in her room in Portland, Wednesday afternoon, when a tramp called at the door, to whom she gave food. Suppostup him gone she ran into a neighbor's house, leaving the back door unfastened. On her return home' she heard some one up stairs, and going to see who it was she found the same man. She started to run down stairs and the burglar pireued her. Mrs. Patterson tripped at the head of the sinirs, over a bundle of men's clothing the burglar had gathered up, and fell. The burglar gave her a kick that sent her down the whole flight, he running after her. She got up and ran into the patlor. The brute chased her and knocked her down, but she scrambled to her feet and got into the sitting-room. He knocked her over again, and then as she attempted to cry out, setzed her hy the throat and began choking her, while he kicked her fearfuily. The woman fainted and was found by neighbors who cared for her.

The Central Maine Theological Circle was organized in Waterville, Wednesday, it is composed of Baptat ministers from Oldtown to Gardiner. Rev. C. V. Hansen was chosen president. At Wednesday's meeting, Rev. T. E. Easth id, of Bangor, read an essay on "Aaron Burr," and the topic, "The Sanday Evening Meeting," was eprined by Rev. J. M. Wymao, of Angusta. The circle will meet each month at Waterville.

The deadly "double-runner" has been getting in some fine work in Dexter. On Tuesday evening, J. W. Hoogkine, Esq. was struck by a heavily loaded "ripper" that dashed down Main street. He was thrown some distance landing upon his head and shoulders. His wrist was unjointed and many bruises and cuts were inflicted upon his person. The practice of sliding in the street will probably receive a check,

Mr. Benjamin Clark, whose death in Bowerbank was noticed last week, was the first male child born in that township. He was about sixty-four years of age at the time of his decease.

young cavalrymen, still in their riding boots and spurs, as though they had but just returned from drill, came slowly up the slope. Wharton had an open newspaper which be was reading aloud; the others were hanging about him, evidently listening with absorbed attention, to the neglect of their own letters.

"What's the matter with the boye?" asked Kenyon, whimsically, as they approached. "They look as solemn as owls."

she could much better devote her minis-trations to her own children. Just as the situation by the mirthful gleam in indoors, and even the broad verandas of the coloriel's quarters on the north side were no more nopular or populous than those of Capt. Lane at the southwest corper. Mrs. Lane and Miss Marshall attributed this to the fact that the sun on its westward way passed behind their cözy home and left the front piazza cool and, shadel, whereas even the canvass hargings in front of the Morrises could not quite shut out the glare. But Mrs. Morris larghingly declared that since their coming into the society of Fort Ry in sile had become "a decided back number." about you."

"Then how could you find the heart to laugh, Mrs. Lane?" said the major, raising his cap with simulated reproach of mien. "Does it amuse you to see fellow mortals flayed alive? Is it not bad enough that, like Sir Peter Tenzle, I Whether the theory of the colonel's wife was true or not, it must be said to her credit that she accepted the situation with charming grace, and was quite as frequent a visitor at the Lanes' as many of the younger women. Her own guests had leparted, leaving her somewhat lonely, she said; and while she thought it by no means a proper or conventional thing that she should be so
